

April 13, 2020

Caring for Our Frontline Health Workers

Now, more than ever, health workers need our support. As COVID-19 continues to spread, they're on the front lines at this very moment putting themselves at risk to stop this pandemic.

The Samling Group continues to support frontline health workers with much-needed medical supplies. On April 13, 2020, we delivered six large carton boxes of surgical masks as well as disinfectants to the Marudi Hospital. A second batch of surgical masks will be delivered upon arrival within the month.

Following on with our earlier contribution of a PCR machine, lab equipment and other medical supplies to Miri Hospital, Samling delivered the second batch of medical supplies consisting of 50 large carton boxes of surgical masks to Miri Hospital. We are expecting further medical supplies to arrive in the next couple of weeks. Further donation of medical supplies will be made to other recipient hospitals.

Samling stands in unity with the Sarawak State Government in our fight against Covid-19. We are committed to support health workers with what they urgently need to stop this pandemic and to continue providing essential services for families and communities.

